United, pilots renew talks in effort to resolve strike

Atmosphere positive during brief meeting

CHICAGO (AP) — Negotiators for United Airlines and its 5,000 striking pilots turned to the bargaining table Monday, a federal mediator said. The atmosphere was positive as both sides tried to solve the four-day walkout against the nation's largest airline.

Meanwhile, the Federal Aviation Administration reported numerous incidents of pilots from other airlines interfering with United pilots and air traffic controllers. United, which usually logs 1,550 flights daily, planned 207 departures system-wide Monday. The airline has advertised new, experienced pilots and said it was receiving 5,500 applications.

In the bargaining session, Helen Witt, of the National Mediation Board, said during a break that the atmosphere Monday was "positive" and "the people are to talk."

Air Line Pilots Association negotiator J. Brashear described the brief discussion as "very businesslike and cordial."

Company and union representatives met with mediators in the morning to lay down ground rules for further discussions. The mediators later met separately with the company and union.

"We have only one issue. It's a one-issue negotiation," said Brashear before meeting with Witt, and board negotiator Harold Collier.

Brashear was referring to the two-tier wage system sought by United, which would apply a lower wage scale to new hires. The proposal is vehemently opposed by the union, which contends it would create "second-class" workers and potentially dangerous dissension in the cockpit.

"We want to do whatever we can to reach a cost-competitive agreement with our pilots," said United spokesman Tom Germuska.

The airline, whose pilots earn an average of $80,000 a year, says it needs the two-tiered system to compete with airlines that pay less.

The strike began early Friday, and Monday's meeting marked the first resumption of discussion.

Brashear declined to characterize it as a resumption of formal negotiations, but said, "That's what the board is planning."

United spokesman Dan Sheehy called the meeting a formal resumption of "face-to-face" negotiations.

United has said it will soon begin hiring "permanent replacements" for the strikers. They are being hired under a special plan that would pay captains $75,000 a year and lieutenants $50,000.

Meanwhile, FAA Administrator Donald Engen told the Air Line Pilots Association that interference with transmissions could jeopardize air travelers, and warned of possible criminal penalties if the incidents continue. Engen mentioned no airlines or pilots, but FAA sources who spoke on condition of anonymity said the incidents began over the weekend and involved commercial pilots from other airlines.

BYU executive vice president appointed Utah commissioner of higher education

verses Staff Writer

Dr. William Rolfe Kerr, BYU executive vice president, was appointed Utah commissioner of higher education Friday by the Utah State Board of Regents.

Ken C. Gardner, chairman of the Board, said Kerr has "wide-spread experience and unparalleled knowledge" of the state's educational system. "Kerr can be a strong voice for the needs of education in this state," he said.

"I acknowledge this appointment with a profound sense of awe, yet real honor," said the newly-appointed commissioner.

Kerr, who did not apply for the position, said he accepted the nomination after "long deliberation" because of "a prevailing sense of opportunity as well as responsibility."

Kerr will take office June 1, succeeding Dr. Arvo Van Alstyne, who died of cancer last January. He will receive a salary of $82,400 a year, according to C. Gail Norris, acting commissioner of higher education.

In a prepared statement to the press, BYU President Jeffrey R. Holland said, "I have great personal affection, of course, as well as professional respect for Rolfe Kerr, and will always be grateful for the exceptional service he has rendered at BYU. I feel that his broad experience in both public and private higher education has prepared him very well for the important task he now undertakes."

"I acknowledge this appointment with a profound sense of awe, yet real honor."

— Dr. William Rolfe Kerr, BYU executive vice president

Kerr has held administrative, faculty and institutional council positions at five of the nine colleges in Utah, including executive vice president of BYU, president of Dixie College and assistant to the president for University Relations at Utah State University.

As executive vice president at BYU, Kerr has been responsible for the administration of all programs of the university related to Student Services, University Relations, auxiliary services and intercollegiate athletics. Concurrent with his administrative responsibilities, Kerr also received academic appointments and regular teaching opportunities in educational administration, along with service on doctoral committees.

Continued loyalty
As commissioner, Kerr will serve all public educational institutions of higher education in the state, which will exclude BYU. But Kerr affirmed he would continue to have a sense of appreciation and loyalty to the university.

"BYU serves a significant element of the population of this state," said Kerr. "I will exercise my influence to maximize what is offered to Utah."

In his comments to the Board, Kerr expressed his commitment to students, staff and faculty in the state and asked that they, along with citizens and government, unite efforts to meet the challenges ahead. "We must manage the system, rather than be managed by it," said Kerr.

Kerr said the number one issue in Utah is funding to accommodate a projected enrollment increase of more than 20,000 students. "Money is the basis upon which we can take practical steps for quality education."

Commitment to education
He said Utah has a tradition of commitment to education, which he referred to as "the crown jewel in Utah's treasury," and added that that priority must remain where it is.

Kerr stated that the immediate task facing the board will be to appoint a new president at Weber State College. Kerr received his doctor's degree in educational administration from the University of Utah and his master's and bachelor's degrees from Utah State University.

Beirut war brings worst one-day toll since last March

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — The Lebanese capital was engulfed in a two-front war Monday when Shiite Moslem gunmen fought fiercely with Palestinian guerrillas at refugee camps and Moslem and Christian militiamen battled across the Green Line.

Police reported at least 62 people killed and 270 wounded in the fighting — at least 60 of them slain at southern Beirut's refugee camps, which are mainly inhabited by Palestinians. The casualties were the worst single-day toll in Beirut since March 8 when a car-bomb exploded outside a Shiite leader's home, killing 86 people and wounding 280.

Druse leader Walid Jumblatt and other Moslem leaders mediated a cease-fire to start at 5 p.m. Artillery fell silent, but reporters near the camps of Sabra, Chatilla, and Bourj el-Barajneh reported hearing gunfire and explosions after the truce deadline passed.

One Palestinian spokesman, who requested anonymity, said the Shiites' Amal militia used the truce to wrest back "security centers" they lost in Sabra during the day. He said Amal militiamen flanked back into Sabra behind Moslem units of the Lebanese army sent in under the cease-fire accord to separate the combatants.

The army's 6th Brigade command said its units took up positions in Sabra and Bourj el-Barajneh to "preserve security." An army communiqué said the gunfire and explosions were part of "mopping-up operations undertaken by army units." It did not elaborate.

During the fighting, outgunned and outnumbered Palestinians in the three refugee camps held off a series of attacks by the Shiite Moslem Amal militia.

Fighters on both sides were reported locked in hand-to-hand combat at times and there were barages from heavy artillery, mortars and rocket-propelled grenades around the shantytown camps.

Some of the fiercest fighting was around Sabra and Chatilla, where hundreds of Palestinians and Lebanese Moslems were massacred by Christian militias Sept. 16-18, 1982 following Israel's invasion of Lebanon.

"We're taking heavy shelling," one Palestinian in Sabra told The Associated Press by telephone. "Many people are dying in their homes. They don't have shelters."

Terrified families covered behind the flimsy protection of their cement-block homes as shells thudded into the dusty streets. Some families fled in panic during brief lulls in the day-long fighting.

After 21 hours of fighting, a pall of gray and black smoke shrouded the camps. Ambulances, sirens wailing, braved shellfire to rush casualties out of the battle zones.

Hospitals issued urgent radio appeals for blood donors. Two hospitals were hit, one of them in Sabra. The three top floors of the nine-story hospital were badly damaged by mortar salvos which started a fire. It was not known if any of the patients were hurt in the shelling.

Amal, the biggest Shiite militia in Lebanon, has been cracking down on Palestinians for months. It seeks to choke off Palestinian efforts to rebuild a power base in Lebanon after they were driven out by the Israelis in 1982.

There have been frequent skirmishes in the camps as Amal tried to disarm the Palestinians. Monday's fighting apparently broke out after an Amal squad grabbed a teen-age Palestinian in the Sabra camp Sunday night for "illegal possession of arms."

Palestinians said Amal militiamen beat the boy up. When they dragged him back to the camp, a Palestinian shot and wounded an Amal fighter.

General shooting broke out and police described the battles that followed as "the worst armed collision ever" between the two groups in the camps that have a combined population of 120,000.

Amal fighters have spearheaded attacks on the Israeli army, which is expected to complete its withdrawal from Shiite-dominated south Lebanon early next month.

But Amal spokesmen have said the movement does not want to suffer Israeli retaliation raids for renewed Palestinian attacks launched from Lebanon.

Syria, which backs Amal, seeks to oust Palestine and supports PLO dissidents who oppose him.

The Palestinians in the Beirut camps are mostly Araba.

On the Green Line, Christian and Moslem militias fought for the 23rd straight day. The line divides Beirut into Christian and Moslem sectors.

Police said at least two people, one a Lebanese army lieutenant, were killed and 10 wounded.

Forum speaker to discuss myths about protectionism

A BYU professor of economics and law will discuss the United States' move toward a more protectionist trading system at today's Forum assembly.

Dr. J.R. Kearyl will speak at 11 a.m. in the DeJong Concert Hall, HFAC on "Cutting off One's Nose to Spite One's Face: Protectionism and Declining Economic Well-Being."

He will discuss several important myths that suggest that protectionism "saves jobs, protects U.S. incomes," and "allows U.S. firms to adjust to international competition." He will also explore the movement toward "voluntary" restrictions on exports to the U.S. by America's trading partners.

Kearyl received a bachelor's degree in mathematics and economics from Utah State University in 1971 and a doctoral degree in economics from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1975. He completed post-doctoral studies in economics and law at Harvard University in 1978.

He has been a BYU faculty member since 1975, and last year was selected as one of 13 1984-85 White House Fellows.

He has also written numerous articles for professional and lay journals.

After-tax income up 2.9 percent

WASHINGTON (AP) — Americans' after-tax personal income, boosted by the belated receipt of tax refund checks, climbed a record 2.9 percent in April, the government said Monday.

While President Reagan pronounced the nation in "good economic health," some analysts expressed concern about weak growth of wages in the private sector which showed up in the Commerce Department report.

The gain in after-tax, or disposable, income in April followed declines of 0.4 percent in March and 0.7 percent in February. Both those drops were blamed on computer problems which delayed processing of tax refund checks in those two months.

The surge in refund checks last month put more money in Americans' pockets and pushed personal consumer spending up by 0.7 percent, a sharp reversal of the 0.2 percent decline in March. Economists predicted further gains in coming months as more of the late tax payments reach consumers.

The refund snafu had a ripple effect throughout the entire economy, holding down economic growth by 1.1 percentage point during the first three months of the year, some economists estimated.

The gross national product, the broadest measure of economic health, grew at a weak 1.3 percent annual rate during the first three months of the year, the slowest pace since the end of the 1981-82 recession.

The government will revise that GNP estimate Tuesday and many analysts are predicting the revision will take growth even lower. It is felt that America's good economic health is still in question.

Summer follows spring, inflation will remain low and our economy will continue to grow, creating still more jobs.

Wall Street took heart, staging a big rally on the action late Friday by the Federal Reserve Board to lower the discount rate to 7.5%, its lowest level in almost seven years.

LDS leaders counsel men to honor their priesthood

By TOM WALTON
Senior Reporter

President Gordon B. Hinckley, second counselor in the First Presidency of the LDS Church, told priesthood holders Sunday night to strive to live worthy of the marvelous gift of priesthood authority.

President Hinckley's remarks were delivered during a special fireside commemorating the 156th anniversary of the restoration of the Aaronic priesthood by John the Baptist to Joseph Smith and Oliver Cowdery.

"The church leader also took time to answer critics of the church. "Those who would criticize the church know not the power of the priesthood and the truthfulness of this gospel," he said.

President Hinckley recounted the story of the restoration and said it represented the coming to earth of divine authority. Speaking specifically to the Aaronic priesthood holders, he said, "The Priesthood of Aaron you hold is the same priesthood by which the Lord and Savior was baptized at the commencement of His ministry. "All who hold the priesthood are fellow servants of the Eternal God from whom the authority comes," he said.

Elder Russell M. Nelson of the Council of Twelve and Bishop Robert D. Hales, presiding bishop of the church, were the other general authorities who spoke. The fireside included brief talks by Aaronic priesthood holders from Utah and Arizona.

Elder Nelson spoke of a priesthood blessing he gave President Spencer W. Kimball in the hospital in 1977. He said President Kimball was gravely ill, and many feared for his life at the time. During the blessing Elder Nelson felt inspired to promise the prophet he would live. After the blessing, President Kimball made a quick recovery.

"By receiving the power of the priesthood, each one of us can speak with the voice of God," Elder Nelson said.

He also urged those listening to look toward the atonement of Christ, the greatest accomplishment in the history of this earth. "The atonement transformed the limit of life into life without limit," he said.

Drawing an analogy from his experience as an airplane pilot, Elder Hales said each day is a mission, and we should be ready to act instinctively in times of temptation. By so doing, we can "return with honor" to Heavenly Father.

He urged the young men to learn correct principles from the instructors they have in life and to keep open lines of communication between themselves and their parents.

Shawn Wakefield, a deacon from Arizona, was the first speaker. He said being a priesthood holder meant one should be disposed to service. This meant not only administering the ordinances of the sacrament, baptism and gathering fast offerings, but also helping those in need with a smile.

Chris Gould, a teacher from Orem, spoke on how the Book of Mormon prophet Nephi was the hero in his life. He resolved to make his commitment stronger after receiving the priesthood, and now he is preparing himself to serve a full-time mission.

Wayne Porter, a priest from Sandy, echoed the desire to prepare for a mission. He stressed the importance of preparing mentally, physically and spiritually.

Labor union involvement declines; Utah participation below average

By ANGIE HOLDAWAY
Universe Staff Writer

National union participation has steadily decreased over the past few years and labor union involvement in Utah is not much different.

Because Utah has traditionally been a non-union state its union participation figures are lower than the national average. The decline in participation both nationally and locally in the last decade has raised concern among union officials.

A committee established by the AFL-CIO Executive Council issued a report in February 1985 indicating that union membership has declined in absolute numbers in the 1980s.

George Gardner, president of United Steelworkers of America, Local 2701 in Orem, said although the numbers have been declining, this drop is not overwhelming and the participation level of local members has become greater. He attributed this resurgence to the falling economy.

"There has been an intense increase of interest because people see that the decline in economy has created a personal economic crisis," said Gardner.

According to the committee's report, the proportion of workers who are eligible to join a union to those who in fact belong to a union has fallen from close to 45 percent to less than 25 percent since 1954.

The changing attitude of workers, the nature of work, the organization of the workplace and the size, location, composition and background of the workforce have been blamed for the decline in union participation.

Technological advances have eliminated entire occupations, outdated scores of jobs and have created a world of completely new employment opportunities. Because of these factors, labor unions have experienced a drastic decline in membership and participation.

Gardner said he foresees an increase in union participation in Utah's service industry. He attributed this increase to a greater awareness among workers and the projected growth in Utah's population.

Manufacturing and construction currently account for 50 percent of the labor union's membership, but these sectors have declined relative to others and currently employ only 22 percent of the civilian workforce.

In contrast, the service sector of the economy has had, and will continue to have, the largest growth. By 1990, service industries will employ almost three-quarters of the labor force. Yet, according to the report, at present less than 10 percent of the service sector is organized, and only 20 percent of the AFL-CIO membership is unions representing workers in service industries.

"The legitimacy of people working with unions will never cease," said Gardner. Someone must be the referee between the workers and their managers, he said.

Crews halt blazes in north Florida with nature's help

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Stubborn wildfires that burned hundreds of homes and more than 150,000 acres across the length of Florida calmed a bit Monday with help from the weather, giving fire crews time to start assessing damages, officials said.

"They're much quieter now than they have been," said state Forestry Division spokesman Larry Amison.

State officials said the fires were more manageable Monday because of cooler weather.

Burt Sylvers, a National Weather Service forecaster in Miami, said temperatures across the state were lower Monday than they have been in days because of heavy cloud cover. In addition, he said, winds remained at about 10 mph.

Amison said no additional fires had been reported since Sunday, and most of the 33 blazes still burning were contained, with the exception of some in Bay and Calhoun counties in the Panhandle, north and east of Panama City, and in Volusia and Flagler counties, north and south of Daytona Beach on the northeast coast.

At the peak of the outbreak Saturday, about 90 fires were reported statewide, according to Amison.

Two firefighters died fighting the blazes.

Ex-Klan leader forms new computer network

HOUSTON (AP) — A former Ku Klux Klan Imperial Wizard is establishing a computer network in Houston under the name of the "Texas Liberty Net," a Houston newspaper reported Monday.

The Houston Chronicle said the network went on-line a few days ago in affiliation with a neo-Nazi group known as the Aryan Nations.

"You are on-line with the Aryan Nations Liberty Net!" according to an electronic mail message put out by the group. "It is here to serve the folk."

The newspaper said the Texas Liberty Net, established by former KKK Imperial Wizard Louis Beam, joins other extremist networks in Hayden Lake, Idaho; Fayette, N.C.; and Dallas. Beam, who established those networks, lives in Dallas.

The network maintains contact with the Aryan Nations, the Klan, and a violent tax protest group known as Posses Comitatus. It includes anti-Jew, anti-Hispanic and anti-black messages, and advocates assassination of federal law enforcement agents while opposing the federal courts.

Cougars to face Arizona in first-round NCAA action

By BRENT WILCOCK
Universe Sports Writer

"Somewhere over the rainbow, skies are blue. . ." Skies were blue for BYU Saturday as they outlasted the Hawaii Rainbows 6-4 to win the Western Athletic Conference Baseball Championship and advance to the NCAA Regional Tournament in Fresno, Calif., May 23-25.

The Cougars will face Arizona in a 1 p.m. contest Thursday. Cal-Berkeley and host Fresno State are the other squads in the regional.

BYU earned the championship round by defeating Hawaii 6-5 in the first game of the tournament and Utah 12-10 in the fourth game.

The championship game was exciting as BYU pitcher Ron Masino and Hawaii's Bruce Walton squared off in a pitching duel during the early innings of the game. BYU led early as lead-off batter Gary Schoonover singled and scored the first run of the game.

BYU was quiet until the bottom of the fifth inning when the Cougars got four runs on five singles and a sacrifice fly to lead 5-1. Ron Masino gave way to Carl Kellipule in the eighth inning after giving up a home run to tournament Most Valuable Player Mario Monico.

Controversy broke out in the eighth inning after Hawaii's Randy Oyama walked and Bob Collum hit a double play to BYU's Brian Carroll. Carroll flipped the ball to shortstop Gary Schoonover who tagged second, but was taken out by a sliding Oyama breaking up the double play. Base umpire Jim Gilbert ruled that Oyama interfered with Schoonover's throw to first and called both runners out. The play ended the inning denying Hawaii a run. BYU coach Gary Pullins said of the call, "That was obviously the big play in the game. . . but it was not a controversial call at all. You have to slide directly into the base, you can't pop up."

BYU's Mark Beavers, the tournament's Most Valuable Pitcher, came in to stop Hawaii in the ninth inning and preserve the victory and the title for the Cougars.

In Thursday's game against Hawaii the Cougars had strong pitching from Mark Beavers, excellent fielding and timely hitting to defeat the scrappy Hawaii squad. Mark Inouye was the hero of the game as he knocked in the winning run in the bottom of the ninth inning to lead the Cougars to a 6-5 victory.

Friday's game with Utah provided the fans with

In the crucial play of Saturday's championship game Hawaii's Randy Oyama slides into BYU shortstop Gary Schoonover to break up a double play in the eighth inning. The umpire said that Oyama illegally interfered with the throw and ruled the double play completed, ending a Rainbow rally in BYU's 6-4 victory.

a home run spectacular as eight home runs were hit in the game. BYU was down 8-2 at one point, but rapped out seven runs in the sixth inning to take the lead. Utah regained the lead, but BYU's Dave Morrow provided the heroics as he hit a towering three-run homer over both fences in the bottom of the ninth to give the Cougars a 12-10 victory.

The Cougars did not fare well in Saturday's first game with Hawaii. BYU led 10-6 but Hawaii scored 12 runs in the eighth to provide a margin the Cougars could not overcome. BYU came back in the second game to beat the Rainbows 6-4 and it was said

able to qualify today, and it was said when I missed the mark by only one inch," Sundin said. He has already qualified in the discus with a 199-8 throw — third best in the nation.

Ed Eyston qualified in the 5,000-meter run with a time of 13:36.05 seconds. He went to Eugene, Ore., to qualify because the altitude is lower than it is in Provo. Eyston has already qualified in the 10,000-meter with a time of 27:41.00, the nation's fastest time this year.

The Cougars will compete Wednesday at 40 athletes from the Canadian National Team.

Two Cougars achieve qualifying track marks

Only one Cougar athlete qualified for nationals at the BYU Last Chance Invitational track meet on Saturday, but several athletes came close to a qualifying mark.

Soren Tallhem qualified in the javelin event with a toss of 256-7, which was 8 feet better than the qualifying mark. Tallhem will also compete in the shot put, where he is ranked No. 1 with a season-high toss of 63-6 1/2.

Lars Sundin was one Cougar who came close to qualifying Saturday. He missed the qualifying mark in the shot put by one inch. "I thought I would be able to qualify today, and it was said when I missed the mark by only one inch," Sundin said. He has already qualified in the discus with a 199-8 throw — third best in the nation.

Ed Eyston qualified in the 5,000-meter run with a time of 13:36.05 seconds. He went to Eugene, Ore., to qualify because the altitude is lower than it is in Provo. Eyston has already qualified in the 10,000-meter with a time of 27:41.00, the nation's fastest time this year.

The Cougars will compete Wednesday at 40 athletes from the Canadian National Team.

Two women Cougars make track nationals

At least eight athletes will represent the BYU women's track team in Austin, Texas, next week for the national championships, as two more runners were able to qualify over the weekend.

Although no Cougars qualified in Saturday's Last Chance Invitational, four long distance runners qualified in separate competition in Eugene, Ore.

All-America Janell Burgon won the 10,000 meters at the Braithwaite Memorial Run in Eugene, just beating the NCAA qualifying time. Angela Cook placed fourth in the 1,500 meters to qualify in that event.

Aisling Molloy broke her own school record in the 1,500 meters to re-qualify. Jill Holiday placed third in the 3,000 meters to qualify for nationals in that event after already qualifying in the 5,000-meters in an earlier meet.

Although no Cougars qualified, the Last Chance meet helped several other teams to qualify members for nationals. There were athletes who were able to qualify in the Last Chance that might not have otherwise, said women's track coach Craig Poole.

Basketball office signs 4 women to 1985-86 team

The BYU women's basketball team has four athletes who have signed national letters of intent to play for the Cougars next season. They are Carrie Maxwell, Susan Shumway, Fran Wynn and Karina Zapata.

Maxwell is a 5-foot-7 guard who played at Highland High School in Salt Lake City. During the 1985 season, she averaged 22.5 points per game (ppg), made 62 percent of her field goal (FG) attempts, shot 74 percent at the free-throw (FT) line, grabbed seven rebounds per game (rpg), and dished out seven assists a game.

Shumway is a 6-foot center/forward who played at Round Valley High School in Springerville, Ariz. Her statistics for 1985 were 22.3 ppg, 41 percent FG, 12.1 rpg, 3 blocks per game, 4 assists and 79 percent FT.

Wynn and Zapata are both 5-foot-4 guards from Kirtland, N.M. Wynn played at Corona Del Mar High School and Zapata played at Kirtland Central High.

Stanford aces Y 6-0 in NCAA tennis

The third-seeded Stanford Cardinals shut out the BYU men's tennis team 6-0 Saturday in the opening round of the NCAA Tennis Championships.

The Cougars' record fell to 24-6 as they were ousted from the single-elimination team competition. The Cardinals improved their record to 21-3.

Dan Goldie, the No. 1-ranked player in the nation, defeated BYU's Rob Fought, who was ranked No. 30, 6-1, 6-2. Third-ranked Jim Grabb defeated BYU's Dave Harkness 6-1, 6-2. Derrick Rastagno, ranked No. 10, defeated Greg Hayward, 6-2, 6-4.

The Cardinals' Patrick McEnroe, tennis pro John McEnroe's brother, won a tie-breaker against BYU's Robert Garbell in the first set. McEnroe went on to defeat Garbell, 7-6, 6-4.

No. 26-ranked Eric Rosenfeld of Stanford defeated injured Rick Bohne of BYU, 6-3, 6-0.

In the closest match of the day, BYU's Andy Noorda won the first set against Stanford's John Lettis, 6-0. Lettis then won the next sets, 7-5, 6-1, to win the match.

Alpine officials define eligibility

Alpine school board officials have enacted new district-wide standards that require minimum classroom achievement from high school students participating in interscholastic activities.

Beginning the second quarter of next year, students must maintain at least a 2.0 — a "C" average — to be eligible for any activity such as sports, drill team or debate.

Students will be required to have maintained a 2.0 grade point average in the preceding quarter, as well as the one in which they are enrolled.

The new requirements also state that no student shall be eligible to represent his school if he fails more than one subject during the quarter in which he is enrolled.

Board officials said any student who loses the right to participate could improve grade deficiencies and failures through various educational programs, tutoring, night school or any other method deemed acceptable by the school.

Though several schools in the district have already set their own standards for participation in activities, this is the first time that such requirements have been enacted on a district-wide level.

For those students wishing to appeal a decision barring them from competition, the district will establish a formal appeals process.

Included in that process will be special consideration for those who have extenuating circumstances as well as a committee to hear all appeals.

Board officials said the district would not circumvent any school to hear an appeal, but that all appeals will first be heard in the school where the student was barred from competition.

Board officials hope the new requirements will help students see the importance of placing education before extra-curricular activities.

Preliminary hearing set for teen-ager charged in foster home killing

The preliminary hearing for a teen-ager charged with the 1984 killings of his foster parents has been set for Tuesday in Spanish Fork.

Nicholas Alan Clatterback, 16, will appear before Judge Joseph Dimick of the 8th Circuit Court for the 9 a.m. hearing. The teen-ager is accused of killing Gordon Kent Burke, 42, and Suzanne L. Burke, 36, the operators of a foster home service in Genola, Utah.

The Utah County couple was killed in their mobile home the night of Feb. 28, 1984. Mr. Burke was shot several times in the head and torso, and Mrs. Burke was shot in the head and face as well as stabbed.

For several months before the shootings, Clatterback lived with the Burkes in a foster care arrangement as a ward of the juvenile court.

The Burkes were licensed by the state to work with troubled youth through Great Basin Youth Services. They were also the parents of four children of their own, all under the age of eight.

Clatterback, who is originally from Sandy, was certified to stand trial as an adult after an April 1984 hearing before Judge Leslie D. Brown of the 3rd District Juvenile Court. That ruling was recently upheld after an appeal to the Utah Supreme Court.

'Evening of Dance' will star children, original movement

By DOUG TREGEAGLE
Universe Staff Writer

Original movement, through the use of line, design and space will be explored by more than 70 youth tonight and Wednesday.

"An Evening of Dance" will feature creative dances performed by dancers between the ages of 4 and 18. There are no "routines" as such in the evening and skill is not the only priority, according to Chris Ollerton, director of the Children's Dance Theater.

"We are striving for a balance between physical skill and allowing children to express themselves creatively," said Ollerton.

More than 300 young performers did a show Saturday for parents and friends composed of numbers the children themselves made up. The children even had a say in the lighting and costumes used in their number. "They did it all," said Ollerton.

Five of the most outstanding student numbers from Saturday's show will be presented during "An Evening of Dance."

Company dancers, who will perform the dances during the evening, are considered to be more experienced as well as more outstanding as far as technique and creative skills are concerned.

One of the numbers to be presented is "Dances You Can Do Alone," originally choreographed by the late Dee Winterton, who directed the Young Ambassadors for many years. The number has been recreated by BYU faculty member Fat Debenham and will feature members of the Mountain View High School Dance Club.

Other numbers include "Sildin," which features the young performers sliding in giant piles of paper, and "Blast-Off," which features all the young men in the company. Mark Huffman, who currently is one of the directors working with the Young Ambassadors, helped the boys with all their numbers.

The children's dance program is conducted through BYU's courses and conferences and integrated through the Dance Department.

"Children in creative dance classes are encouraged to do their own thinking and problem solving," said Ollerton. "They contribute ideas through unique self-expression."

Children's dance classes serve to educate BYU students as well as the young dancers. Classes teach students educational philosophy and act as labs for methods and productions classes. "BYU students observe, teach and generally learn more about children and dance," Ollerton said.

"An Evening of Dance" will be presented at 8 p.m. tonight and Wednesday in 185 RB.

"An Evening of Dance" will feature numbers performed by dancers between the age of four and 18. Jenny Hodges (above) will perform in a dance called "Little April Showers."

Too much TV can make children fat

BOSTON (AP) — Heavy doses of television can make children fat, and youngsters who are addicted to the tube early in life often grow to be overweight teenagers, a new study has found.

The research found that among adolescents, the incidence of obesity increases by 2 percent for each additional hour that they average in front of the television each day.

"I'm not saying that television viewing causes all childhood obesity. It doesn't," said Dr. William H. Dietz Jr. "But clearly there is a group of children and teen-agers in whom it is a very important factor in the genesis of obesity." The researchers theorize that dedicated television watchers are fatter than other youngsters because they eat more and exercise less while glued to the set. Dietz recommended that parents keep track of how much time their children spend watching television.

Gateway to America seems to be the West

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The gateway to America seems to be swinging to the West Coast.

In 1983, some 21.7 million international visitors came to this country, according to the U.S. Travel and Tourism Administration. California was No. 1 U.S. destination and received 33 percent of all overseas visitors.

To handle overseas air travelers, Los Angeles International Airport has more than doubled its terminal space, increased the central terminal roadway capacity by 60 percent, and completed major airfield and cargo facility improvements.

Faculty member makes imaginary seem real with art

By DOUG TREGEAGLE
Universe Staff Writer

Making things that are not real seem real to the viewer is the goal of James C. Christensen, a member of the BYU faculty.

Christensen's work, along with that of 21 other fantasy and science fiction artists from throughout the United States, is bringing Gallery 308 alive with non-existent images throughout May.

Fantasy art "is the art of the implausible," said Christensen. "It is worlds that don't exist."

"Fantasy art has been mainly used for book covers and such," said Christensen. "It should be more than that."

Christensen recently became chairman of the Board of the National Academy of Fantastic Art. He feels fantasy should become more acceptable to collectors and others interested in art.

"The goal of the organization is to foster and encourage the art of fantastic," said Christensen.

NASA recently asked Christensen for some of his work. When he replied that he did not do "high tech" work, they told him to do a "low tech" piece.

What resulted was Christensen's image of a "backyard astronaut" from his imagination.

Old Frankenstein and Dracula movies inspire Christensen's work, as well as the Lord of the Rings series. There is a certain amount of social comment in his work, but some of it is just fanciful. "It is a lot of fun," said Christensen.

"The exhibit is the first of its kind but we are hoping to have many more in the future," said Christensen.

The artists call the collection a "weird, wild, witty, whimsical and wonderful touring exhibition... by a capricious collection of imaginative illusionists." The common bond among the artists is their belief in magic and imagination.

"We have been trying to get this exhibit for more than a year," said gallery director Clyff Allen. "Many of the artists are in demand in the illustration world and we are excited to show their work."

Christensen graduated from BYU with a master's degree in art in 1968. He began showing his works, with the encouragement of friends, in the early 1970s. He has won several awards for his art and has illustrated several children's books.

Dance America raises money for hospitals across country

Pop figure Andy Gibb and members of the television show "Solid Gold" teamed up at the 49th Street Galleria in south Salt Lake City to co-host the simulcast "Dance America" program Saturday.

Organized by the Osmond Foundation, the "Dance America" marathon raised money to support children's hospitals. The dance at Osmond Studio raised more than $800 for the Children's Primary Hospital in Salt Lake City.

More than 100 dance halls across the United States and Canada participated in the event.

UNIVERSITY FORUM & DEVOTIONAL

de JONG CONCERT HALL

Professor James R. Kearl
Tuesday, May 21, 1985

"Cutting Off One's Nose to Spite One's Face: Protectionism and Declining Economic Well-Being"

In a large number of areas, including shoes, textiles, copper, steel, consumer electronics, autos, etc., there is a concerted attack on open or liberal trade policies. Despite the achievements of open trade and the enormous costs associated with trade restrictions or protectionism, we are moving toward a more closed trading system. In perhaps no other area of social policy are there so many enduring myths that are so demonstrably incorrect, yet so persistently invoked. If open or free trade is such a great thing, why do protectionist myths persist? Professor Kearl will explore this puzzle and examine carefully several of the most important myths that suggest that "protectionism 'saves jobs,'" "protects U.S. incomes," "allows U.S. firms to adjust to international competition," etc. He will conclude by exploring the particularly alarming trend in recent U.S. trade policy—the movement toward "voluntary" restrictions on exports to the U.S. by our trading partners and the accompanying bilaterally managed trading environment.
